Case - Timothy N. Pfeiffer,
Subject - Homicide, New Brunswick, N.J.,
Operative--312

312/general

Mr. Bradley advised Operative that Carpenter is the fellow who was in the Navy and commanded the boat that sunk the first German Submarine. Bradley then advised Operative that it would be a d--- shame if they arrested Carpenter.

Upon conclusion of the conversation with Mr. Bradley, Operative left him and returned to Town and joined Garry Kenny at the railroad station. While at the railroad station talking to Garry Kenny, Mr. Kirby came in and Garry introduced him to Operative.

Mr. Kirby inquired of Operative as to his business, and Operative advised him that he was in the sporting goods line. Mr. Kirby then advised Operative that he could sell some of his stuff the day of the football game, suggesting that Operative get a bunch of yellow flowers and sell them for a quarter apiece. Operative questioned Mr. Kirby concerning a permit, and Mr. Kirby told Operative to come over and see him at the Court House. Upon Operative leaving Mr. Kirby, Mr. Kirby remarked, "Now don't forget to see me Wednesday, and I will fix it up so that you can get a permit so that you can sell any of those things."

Upon leaving the railroad station, Operative proceeded to the Middlesex Lunchroom and while at the Middlesex Lunchroom, an Officer by the name of Jimmie came in. Then Jimmie and some other fellows began to talk about the game, and what a big game it was. Operative then remarked to one of them, "It's a wonder you wouldn't let a fellow in on it." One of the fellows answered Operative, saying, "Why the place is a big gambling dump on Church Street the first barber shop from Spring, lot of the big fellows and Officials go there." The fellow who made the above remark was named Bob. The Officer inquired from the fellows as to whether they had had a big game there today. One of the fellows then replied to the Officer named Jimmie, saying, "Yes, it
